Remembering The Forgotten German Holocaust

Every week, every year, for every decade since the end of World War Two we in the West are and have been deluged with propaganda about and personal stories concerning "the Jewish holocaust" with our children brainwashed in school to believe that national identity based on ethnicity (racial, or ethnic, nationalism) is therefore "evil".

Here is one such and recent personal story about alleged "Nazi crimes":

> "My maternal grandfather was one of the Jewish men rounded up after Kristallnacht – & sent to Sachsenhausen concentration camp 2 days before his 23rd birthday. His father died in Theresienstadt & his mother in Auschwitz."

Yet we never get to hear or read about the German Holocaust; about how the Allies (which Allies included the Soviet Union) caused millions of Germans to suffer and die.

Personal stories, for instance, about "Allied crimes", such as Operation Gomarrah, the Hamburg firestorm which killed over 35,000 civilians. Personal stories, for instance, about the bombing of Dresden which killed over 30,000 civilians. Personal stories, for instance, about the death of almost a million Germans from starvation caused by Allied bombing and the Allied blockade; and personal stories about the mass rape of German women by Soviet women with rape, as described by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn in his Prussian Nights, regarded by the Soviets as an acceptable act of war. {1}{2}

This death of Germans, mostly women, children and the elderly, from starvation due to Allied bombing and the Allied blockade is never mentioned while the deaths from starvation in the concentration camps is a regular when alleged "Nazi crimes" are described.

We never thus get to hear personal stories about how "my grandfather was one of those many German soldiers captured by Soviet troops and sent to a Soviet gulag where he and other German were brutally treated and where he and many other Germans died."

We never get to hear personal stories about how "my paternal grandfather and mother" died in the the Hamburg firestorm. Never get to hear personal stories about how "my great Aunt was gang raped and killed by Soviet soldiers." We never get to hear personal stories about how "my great Aunt and great Uncle died of starvation during their flight and expulsion from Eastern Europe", an Allied expulsion which caused an estimated two million deaths. That the blame for the millions of such German deaths is placed on NS Germany instead of on Allied policy {3} is an astonishing feat of post-WWII Allied propaganda.

That the religious myth of the Jewish holocaust has shaped such successful post-WWII Allied propaganda should be evident, for such propaganda about the religious myth of the Jewish holocaust has shaped the national identity that successive West German governments wanted to develop: a multicultural, multiracial identity to atone for alleged "Nazi crimes", and an atonement evident in allowing and encouraging millions of non-White immigrants to settle in West Germany to such an extent that one in four of school students are now non-white {4}.

In the 1960s and 1970s East Germany was still an almost entirely White country where nationalism survived in the hearts and minds of many East Germans whereas in West Germany nationalism based on ethnic identity was suppressed and discouraged since West Germans were taught that such nationalism caused "the Jewish holocaust" and led to those crimes which German National Socialists were allegedly guilty of.

With the resurgence of a Germany nationalism based on ethnic identity in former East Germany – aided in part by groups such as Alternative für Deutschland – perhaps we shall soon hear of read of personal stories about how the German people suffered because of the Allies during and after World War Two.

That it is now heresy – in Germany and some other Western lands and punishable by imprisonment – to deny or even to call into question the religious myth of the Jewish holocaust – should be sufficient to call into question the official, State-sanctioned, version of World War Two, and sufficient to spur individuals to seek out and to publish stories about how the German people suffered because of the Allies during and after that war.

Richard Stirling
2019
v. 1.5, Revised 2024

{1} The number of German women raped is estimated to be around two million, qv. Helke Sander and Barbara Johr, BeFreier und Befreite. Fischer, Frankfurt am Main, 2005

{2} As Solzhenitsyn writes, the Soviet motto was НЕ ЗАБУДЕМ! НЕ ПРОСТИМ! – "Never Forget, Never Forgive" – and which motto in translation has become a rallying cry for Western anti-fascist groups and for Zionists and their combined crusade against both "racial nationalists" and those who have doubts about the religious myth of the Jewish holocaust.

{3} Hans Henning Hahn and Eva Hahn. Die Vertreibung im deutschen Erinnern. Legenden, Mythos, Geschichte. Paderborn 2010, pp. 659-726

{4} https://www.nytimes.com/2019/11/08/world/europe/germany-identity.html

Original Source for v.1:
https://web.archive.org/web/20210508094220/https://wyrdsister.wordpress.com/2019/11/09/remembering-the-german-holocaust/

This item is in the Public Domain